The 5 day voluntary teaching summer camp definitely gives me an experience of village life and a chance to inculcate values to children. I found happiness in Dabao village especially when getting along with the children. This is the first time for me to walk into the village and transfer messages to villagers. Those messages include health education, voluntary teaching, or some positive values. I was fulfilled when I saw the smile on children's face. The most impressive programme for me is family visit. There were only a boy and his grandma. After I understood his family situation and his health, I realised how rich Hong Kong children were. At least we could receive adequate medical care and education. I felt like some people not really do not want to change their life, instead there are lots of limitation and obstacles. Lastly I would like to give special thanks to Project Mingde which provides me a valuable opportunity to enrich my mind. I would also like to give thanks to every participant in this camp who contribute and teach me a lot.
