This was the first my voluntary teaching experience in China's rural area, and it may become one of the most unforgettable experiences.

The voluntary teaching consisted of 5 parts, which were ice breaking, family visit, water rocket experiment, health education and sex education, and I was responsible for the water rocket experiment. In fact, I really enjoyed doing this experiment because every student could make their own rocket. Smiles from their face was the best reward for our work. And I was happy to see it.

One of the most memorable things in Dabao happened after visiting a home of little girl at the first night in Dabao. It rained heavily and we needed went school for debriefing section. My group mate and I didn't bring any umbrellas so we asked villagers for umbrella. They were very nice and brought us some umbrellas immediately. In addition, although we refused several times, father of the girl still went to school with us. It was unforgettable because he helped us even it was the first time we met.
