

Summer Camp Reflection

CHAN Chun Hin

This is the fourth time for me to visit Guangxi and the second time to Wangdong. Last time, I went to Wangdong in December. It was winter and the temperature was good. This time, it was summer. I expect it to be extremely hot and we may sweat a lot when walking outside. However, the situation was different from my expectation. There are less high-rise building to block the wind. We felt comfortable even when we exposed ourselves under the sunlight because of the cool wind. The countryside was a great place to live in.

The former trip's aim was to work for the construction project and this trip was to undergo voluntary teaching. The nature of the trip was different. It was the first time for me to organise this kind of voluntary teaching and I was worried. Many thing was uncertain and decisions was made in a hurry. The teaching plan was not finalized on the day we arrived at the school because of communication difficulties between the school and us. However, we still managed to complete the work at last. The smile and tear we saw when we left the school was the greatest gift and experience throughout the year.

After the voluntary teaching, we visited Kelu's home and stayed a night there. It was a great experience for me to live in such a unique house. It was also an unforgettable night as we had dinner and barbecue with the villagers and observed the star.
