

Construction Work

The project was about the construction of a swimming pool in the Trung Dung secondary school in Vietnam. I was glad to work with the local contractor and workers. I learn lots of practical skills from the workers. We had the opportunities to do the hands-on works during those seven weeks. Apart from the on-site jobs, the construction experience included daily supervision, weekly meeting, minutes taking and report writing. I believed that what I learned in the past several weeks would be useful for my future career path.

Need Assessment and Evaluation

Apart from the construction work, one of the critical parts was to do the need assessment. We worked in groups and visited the household and different clubs in the villages. It was to get close to the commune and evaluate the need for them. This job required active team cooperation. Every teammate in our group got along well with each other so that we could complete our works efficiently. It was an excellent chance for me to know the needs of the developing commune in Vietnam and know how World Vision helps villagers to have a better life.

CIP Lessons

Teaching Child Injury Prevention (CIP) lesson was cross-team cooperation. Without everyone's effort, it was impossible to finish the lessons. I participated in preparing the teaching material and teaching the children in the class. In the beginning, we did not the teaching style and children's interest. It was not an easy job to draw the students at the beginning. But we tried our best to prepare and improve it. The interpreters helped us to translate and share their experience of how to have a better lesson for the children. By these lessons, we had the opportunities to interact with the local children.

Conclusion

Overall, it was a memorable experience for me to stay in Hung Yen. I learned a lot from the construction work and also from the culture and people. It was a fruitful trip for me to learn new things and meet new people. Thanks for helping us in Vietnam.
