Productivity measures the output to input ratio and provides valuable insights into the long-term potential of an economy. The construction industry makes a significant contribution to securing a sustainable future of Hong Kong. Therefore, construction industry productivity has long been an important issue for Hong Kong, which nevertheless is faced with severe challenges such as cost escalation and labour shortage. This international consultation forum is part of a study funded by the Construction Industry Council (CIC) and led by The University of Hong Kong (HKU), which aims to enhance the productivity and efficiency of the Hong Kong construction industry by conducting a comprehensive and rigorous investigation on the practices, procedures and standards adopted in the industry. The forum aims to explore strategies and measures, both locally and internationally, for improving construction industry productivity in five strategic areas, namely, (1) policy formation; (2) regulatory requirements; (3) planning and design; (4) project management and administration; and (5) site construction. The forum will feature renowned international and local speakers to share the state-of-the-art knowledge and practice of enhancing construction productivity at industry, project and activity levels.

Attending this seminar is FREE of charge, but advanced registration is required on the first-come first served basis.
